Front spokesman Medhin de Garang told newsmen that his group handed over counter-proposals at a meeting here with a Sudan govern ment delegation headed by Abel Alier, Vice-President and Minister for Southern Affairs. The talks between the two sides opened here on Wednesday.

Mr. de Garang said: "We reject local autonomy because it does not satisfy the aspirations of our people." In a federation both regions would enjoy local autonomy and each would have its own armed forces. The Liberation Front proposed a federal president elected by universal suffrage with a vice-president from each region.

Mr. de Gerang said there should be international observers for a cease-fire and implementation of any agreement. There would be long discussions on the matter of regional autonomy or federation, but the Front was not prepared to continue talks in Khartoum, he said.

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter The Jordanian Minister of Information, Adnan Abu Odeh, yesterday denied that King Hussein had sent an envoy to the West Bank to sound out the views of local inhabitants on the forthcoming municipai elections.

The Jordanian Minister was referring to an Israel Radio report which said that the envoy had resided in an East Jerusa and that he had held talks with notables in Jerusalem, Nablus and Hebron. The radio report did not identify the man, although it was believed to have referred to an Amman journalist, Kamel Keilani, who came last week as a tourist. Local Arab notables who were mentioned in connection with him had in the meantime scoffed at the speculations that the man was an emissary of the Jordanian government. Information Minister Abu Odeh said that there was no need for Jordan to send an envoy to the West Bank since "the link between to demand an end to what they us and the inhabitants of the West Bank has not ceased and we are aware of their views."

Strangely, this was happening at the same time as the West was implying that the Soviet Union was training Egyptian military person-nel to replace its own. One observer's opinion is that the Soviet Union wanted to demonstrate that it was not seeking a physical pre-sence in the Land of the Nile, in an attempt to assuage the suspicions of the Egyptians and other doubting Arab states.

Willingly or unwillingly, Sadat is apparently a major factor in this Soviet operation. It is to be re-called that, on his return from Moscow, the Egyptian President said that he would consolidate relations with other Arab states, no matter what their ideologies might be. This might well be the first step in the

Trying to cover up for their present woes, the terrorists have been issuing "military cammuniques" almost daily claiming escalated activity in the major cities. As soon as the Israel radio reports either a power failure in some part of the country or a fire breaking in one city, the Fatah information office in Beirut issues a "communiqué" claiming responsibility for the reported incident, quoting a "commando source" on the damages and casualties inflicted. The communiques in their Fatah form are then dispatched to the outside world, from Beirut, by news agencies; Arab states, hearing them, often renew their pledges of financial and material support to the "Palestine revolution." The terrorists also continue to assert their "right to speak for the Palestinians, including those of the Israel-held territories." The so-called National Congress of the Palestine Liberation Organization is planning to convene next month in Cairo to discuss the Israeli authorization of municipal elections on the West Bank — on March 28 in Samaria and on May 2 in Judea. But the West Bank Arabs, most of whom realize the truth about the alleged "revolution," are not influenced by the voice of the terrorists.

The sealing off of the border to terrorists and possible under-cover yields are equally slim. Jordanian infiltration will also ensure that the West Bank inhabitants will be able to decide their own fate unfettered and without pressure from any outside sources. Lastly it will considerably ease security prob-lems inside Israel proper as well as the West Bank in the face of whatever opposition the terrorists may try to raise against it (Moscow- and/or Peking-inspired).

Pluck, luck

As far as the Golan Heights are concerned it should be recalled that the Mandatory frontiers (which were all Syria had a legal claim to, as far as the 1949 cease-fire agreement was concerned) ran along the upper side of the Jordan Valley ridge. For well over 20 years, the Syrians took; possession of this strip without raising much more than some international eyebrows (the same also holds good for the Gaza. > It has been said on more than one occasion that if it had not been for the 1967 war, Israel would have been compelled to launch a preemptive campaign now, consider-ing the $5,000m. worth of sophisticated military (Soviet) hardware piled up in Egypt alone.

The situation might have remained deadlocked as it is and for many more years to come (and it was Israel's primary military aim to achieve just this, a "no-shooting" deadlock as a first phase) had it not been for our "best friends" the Egyptians themselves, Internal pressure building up west of the Suez Canal is creating an intolerable situation for the Egyptian leadership, Israel remains in Sinai, displaying her flag from across the 150 metres of the waterway, and there is nothing Egypt can do about it. The fact that Sadat intends to bring down 10,000 Cairo students to see this (as was announced in Egypt this week) won't improve the situation — it may only make it pan-Arabian unity which might have attempted some joint military effort had the defunct eastern (second) front ever become reality. But it did not, and what was left of it was scuttled, once and for all, by the devastating defeat of 1967.

All President Anwar Sadat can hope for under the circumstances is to gain a little time and perhaps, by some stroke of luck, some more good excuses like the Indo-Pakistani war (which he used to explain why, despite all the bluster and sabre-ratting of 1971, things are still very much as they were). Latest excuse

the Egyptian army to imitate Is-rael's methods and even weapons such as the purchase of antiquated half-tracks which Egyptian agents tried to round up in European junk yards. Now comes the supply of additional modern American weapons. The U.S. weapons are not vastly superior. Excluding the Phantoms, Israel has received largely at least 10-year-old models of artillery, tanks and troop carriers, whereas the Egyptians have always received brand new off-the-production-line hardware. But the Egyptian army's seniors have also been looking for excuses, and putting the blame on the Russian equipment was one fast and possibly (for the Egyptians themselves) convincing answer. The combined impact of the Israeli military's status, plus the now seemingly unlimited assistance given to Israel by the U.S. cannot but impress the Egyptians and the Arab world in general.

The most significant change which has taken place here since worse. Egypt cannot muster the the cease-fire went into effect one and three-quarter years ago was the relatively recent change of attitude by Washington towards Israel.
There was (in Washington) a sudden "discovery" of overlapping interests with Israel, and also the fact that they could claim the lion's share of the credit for the cease-fire.

Not a football

On the flower-filled campus of Taipel University, a student protests when I ask him if he is not really Chinese: "We are Formosans whatever Chiang and his clique think of it. Chiang is 85 years old, Mao 81; as long as these terible old men are alive, there will be no hope of a solution. But Chiang Ching-kuo, the Gimo's oldest son who is 61, is more realistic, I suppose that Mao's successor will also be more realistic. We will not be a football for the world to play with forever. Our fate will be decided neither at the U.N., nor in Washington, Tokyo or Moscow, but here in our region; the true representatives of our two people may already have made contact in some discreet hotel in Hong Kong or Singapore..." For the time being, however, all this seems like wishful

Will the fate of Formosa be decided at next week's Nixon-Mao meeting? American circles in Taipel, which are very discreet now-adays, do not exclude conciliatory gestures on the part of the American President. For instance, American troops, who now number about 9.000 men, might be reduced to a few hundred technical advisors. But it is difficult to imagine that Washington will pay the full price Peking is asking — namely the abrogation by the U.S. of the Mutual Defence Treaty, the complete de-nuclearization of the island, and the withdrawal of the American Seventh Fleet which is on permanent patrol in the straits which separate Formosa from the mainland.

It is more likely that minor compromises will be broached in Peking which will put the Taiwan problem on ice and will transform Formosa into a sort of American Albania in Asia, while waiting for better days to come. Obviously, the "Formosan gun" aimed at China has become rusty, and the masters of the Forbidden City see no danger in but on the k

Neev's counsel fails to shake Friedman in six-hour probe

Jerusalem Post Reporter

"He never managed to budge me an inche," said an elated Mordechai Friedman as he walked out of the Witkon Commission's hearing into the Netivel Neft affair yesterday. He had just withstood six hours of ross examination from Mr. Ram Caspi, appointed counsel for Dr. David Neev, the Development Min- quired from Continental, istry geologist whose complaint the Government-owned of company in April last year led to the establishment of the Com-

Mr. Caspi questioned the witness general manager of Netivei Neft, n various aspects of the Neev complaint, and has another two days at his disposal to try and refute what Mr. Friedman has told the Commission since he started testifying on Sunday. Subjects discussed yesterday included the sale of Mr. Friedman's private oil company, Continental, to Midbar, a foreign prospecting company, at the same time he was the Government negotiator

Mr. Caspi brought up all of them, but Friedman was adament in his stand: his equipment, which he had bought from a Canalued by an impartial assessor in the U.S. or anywhere else.

Had no choice

Midbar had extensive drilling operations planned for Israel and they could find no suitable contractor to do the work for them. To bring drilling equipment from abroad would, according to Mr. Friedman, have cost a great deal more than $700,000, and thus taking all these factors into consideration — and that "a fortune" had been spent on keeping the machine in tip top condition — Midbar got an extremely good deal When Mr. Caspi pointed out that an earlier witness, Mr. Yftzhak Lewi, had testified that Mr. Friedman's rig, a U 15, was worth no more than $32,000 at the outset, Mr. Friedman replied that if Lapi dot were to offer him their U 15s for the same price he would "buy them tomorrow." Mr. Levi based his estimate on material he had received from an auctioneering firm in the U.S. which heads mainly in drilling equipment.

Mr. Friedman wanted to know what better proof the lawyer could want that his equipment was wellworth the price, than the fact that Mayflower, another foreign drilling firm which was considering operating in Israel had offered Midhar $750,000 for the same equipment on to the "aesthetic" circumstances surrounding the sale. Mr. Friedman sold Continental at the same time he was negotiating with the Com-pany on behalf of the Government of Israel Before he actually sold the equipment, Continental had submitted and won a tender by Midbar to act as a drilling contractor in Sinal There had been two contenders for the bid, Continental and Lapidot, but Lapidot's general manager, Mr. Mordechai Chen, has claimed that the whole thing was fixed from the start. In an attempt to back up Mr. Chen's claim, Mr. Caspi presented a document stating that Continental had been chosen Mr. Friedman received $700,000 to do the drilling. This was dated Continental was informed that it had won the bid on October 13. A drilling prospectus dated "Septem" ber" states clearly that Continental would do the drilling, thus intimating that the results had been decided before the tender was even

As pointed out by Mr. Friedman, however, Continental submitted its hid on September 3, 1968, and the which he had bought from a Cana-statement in the pamphlet could dian firm. Israel Continental, in have reflected an internal decision 1965 for $385,000, could not be va- taken by Midbar before they decided to inform the parties concerned of their decision. Since the prospectus for drilling operations was dated only "September 1968," Mr. Caspi admitted that this could have been the case, but only because "it was Mr. Friedman's perogative to have the benefit of the doubt."

Mr. Caspi questioned, at great length, the ethics of Continental in having entered the bid at all. How could Mr. Friedman have offered Midbar the services of his private company for drilling in Sinsi at the

AT TEL AVIV UNIVERSITY:

Faculty of Law Publishes ISRAEL YEARBOOK ON HUMAN RIGHTS

The first issue of the Israel Yearbook on Human Rights was recently published in English by the Faculty of Law of Tel Aviv University. It includes papers and discussions from the international Symposium on Human Rights, which took place at the University in July, 1971.

The Sympoaium focused on human rights in time of war. It gave particular emphasis to the territories administered by Israel, and to minority group rights.

military, legal and government representatives took part as well as experts and scientists from all over the world. The Yearbook, edited by Dr. Yoram Dinstein, covers a whole gamut of problems from the plight of Soviet Jewry to the subject of the Arab minority in Israel to the current situation in the Middle East. The question of human rights of groups (as distinct from individuals) closely analysed.

The Yearbook contains the first collection in English of articles and papers on the administered territories, as well as a compilation of military proclamations, orders and judicial decisions relating to the territories.

Yearbook is supported by the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture (New York). Its aim is to publish studies on human rights in the State of Israel and Jewish communities throughout the world. The volume will be of value to lawyers, students, researchers and all those interested in the current state of affairs in the Middle East.

Assistant editor of the Yearbook is Dr. Nitza-Shapiro-Libai. The Editorial Advisory Board in-cludes Justice Haim Cohn of the Israel " Supreme Court, Judge Ze'ev Zekner, Prof. Amnon Rubinstein, Dean of the Faculty of Law at Tel Aviv University, and Prof. Nathan Feinberg of the Hebrew University.

The figures made public show the same picture for all cities. The prices of flets in the coastal area surpassed in 1971 all previous records. Those who bought, however, a flat during the previous peak saw in no case the price of the plus an annual interest income of 9 per cent. This was only the case for those who bought four years later, at the bottom of the mitun. Comparisons of the actual decrease tistics are, however, avallable about the net income on flats in Israel.

Of course, the figures published have to be accepted with care, An interest income of 9 per cent firstly because no possibility exists presented. Secondly, the sample studied was most probably only a limited one. Further, the consideration that since early 1971 prices of prices of real estate per room in the land is sold at profit. In order real estate and flats have again risen considerably, especially efter the August devaluation, has to be taken into account.

Nevertheless, the conclusion that over the years real estate and flats have been an excellent investment only when one was adept or lucky enough to buy when prices were low, seems reasonable. Anybody who bought et a previous peak must wait a long time before he can show, after payment of selling ex-penses and betterment tax, that he has a return on his money that surpasses that on other investments, which have, of course, the advantage of being more liquid.

Announcement to "AMPA" Customers following the Fire in our Service-Centre Tel Aviv

We would like to draw the attention of our customers to the following:

"Ampa" sales and supply of "Amcor" appliances are continuing and our offices are open to the public as usual.

The services in all other "Ampa" service centres throughout the country are operating regularly.

As it was our Central Spares Store that was mainly hit by the fire, a delay in the repair of certain appliances is unavoidable.

The concerned customers are kindly requested to bear it with patience and understanding.

Our Service Centre in Tel Aviv is making all efforts to overcome the ensuing difficulties.

Sadat's address

Ha'aretz (non-party), referring to Sadat's address on Wednesday to the Arab Socialist Union's National Congress, stresses that Sadat did not bind himself by new dates, nor did he reject the American initiative for a partial settlement. "It is to be assumed that on the domestic front, Sadat's purposeless statements were received with a certain disappointment. His call for patience will presumably remain valid for as long as he retains the army's support."

Omer (Histadrut) says that the most outstanding thing in Sadat's address "was his extreme pro-Soviet attitude, and his stress of the price paid to the Russians. Standing out on the practical side was his preference for U.N. mediation over American mediation."

Striking law students fall out with Dean

Shouting "Resign! Resign!," hundreds of Hebrew University law students demonstrated yesterday morning outside the office of the Dean of the Faculty, Professor Schneour Zalman Feller. According to the University spokesman, Professor Feller asked the students to stop their strike, which started on Thursday, and said that he would then discuss all their grievances with them. The students say that they do not believe Professor Feller really intends to take up their complaints in a serious manner.

The students are on strike because they claim that the courses are so arranged as to prevent them holding down jobs and because they want the system of instruction radically changed, with more emphasis on seminars and tutorials rather than lectures.

"It seems strange to us that we should only hear over the radio that the Dean is willing to discuss our demands," Law Student Council Chairman Asher Zwenber told The Jerusulem Post. (Professor Feller's statement was first broadcast over the 2 p.m. news yesterday).

Mr. Zwebner, a third year student, added that plans for the "free university" that the striking law students will open on Sunday at their Mt. Scopus premises, include lectures and discussions led by students on "Students and Legal Aid," "Jewish Law and Morals" and "Current Malpractices in the courts." The students will invite public figures and lawyers to take part.

The classes, open to students from all faculties, will start at The law students are also planning to demonstrate on the Givat Ram campus on Monday. They ask all Hebrew University students to participate.

Our Hasia bureau adds:
The Technion Senate has decided to permit two students representatives to take part in its deliberations, but without the right to vote. Students Union Chairman Ehud Grossman told The Jerusalem Post last night that they were "extremely pleased" with the decision, which crowned a six months' struggle for student repre-

The students themselves had asked for non-voting participation, he said. They knew that two students among the nearly hundred professors on the Senate would not be able to mobilize a majority and by foregoing voting rights they would have a chance to try and persuade the Senate of their point of view.

contains more than 200 pages, in-cluding 15 pages of conclusions and recommendations.

The report presumably places responsibility for the holing incident. It is not known whether it also contains a recommendation about the preservation or demolition of the house which was being repaired. A municipal spokesman yesterday demed a report that the factions in the Municipal Council had agreed to recommend destruction of the building in order to permit continuation of the subterranean dig by the Ministry for Religious Affairs along the western Temple Mount wall. That dig, aimed at exposing the wall underground for its entire length, has been held up for two months by the danger of bringing on an immediate collapse of the building.

Speaking at a rally of Latin American immigrants gathered to mark the 5th anniversary of allya from the South American continent, Mrs. Meir said she is "sure that the vast manifity of Israelis welcome the new immigrants. But ill-feeling is being blown up by the mass media and bad things can spread as readily as good things. Each Israeli should fight this tendency among his friends, neighbours and acquaint-ances," she said.

LIPSKY APPEALS AGAINST ARREST

TEL AVIV. — District Judge Hanna Evenor yesterday ordered French-Jewish businessman Claude Lipsky to be detained pending completion of court hearings on France's request for his extradition.

completion of court hearings on France's request for his extradition. Detention was postponed for 24 hours to allow Lipsky to appeal to the Supreme Court for extension of ball. He did so immediately and the appeal will be heard today. In contrast to Israelis who are detained, Judge Evenor noted, there was no fear that Lipsky would attempt to influence witnesses. But there was serious danger that he might not report to the Court and that an extradition decision might not be executed. Israel's international relations require that she be able to carry out extradition, the Judge said.

Mrs. Evenor said Lipsky was suspected of breach of trust, fraud and theft. But the offences were far more serious than would appear from these formal charges. In the contemporary business irand and their. But the offences were far more serious than would appear from these formal charges. In the contemporary business world, she said, respeciable-seeming companies and subsidiaries could be set up, with all of them in fact being directed by one man, and with the same monies being transferred from company to company for speculative purposes. Some of these funds were liable to disappear along the way, she said.

Such acts of fraud were on the increase in various countries, said the Judge, and they were far more dangerous than ordinary cases of fraud and theft. Lipsky is liable to a maximum term of 10 years in France.

10 years in France.

Mrs. Evenor took up the claim of defence counsel H. Shenhav that racial and religious discrimination was behind the extradi-tion request. She noted the claim that Lipsky's non-Jewish partner, Andre Roland, was walking around free in France, while another French Jew connected with the affair, as well as his lawyer, were under detention.

A statement by a noted French journalist was submitted to the court stating that the reason for the extradition was political. Judge Evenor said that these arguments gave food for thought but they were not sufficient.

The Judge noted that the detention was not any kind of step towards extradition itself. Its purpose was solely to ensure Lipsky's presence during the court hearing and to permit his extradition if necessary.

The immigrant, a 50-year-old woman from a Baltic country, told the court that all her papers carry the name and identity of her sister. The reason for this is that when she, the immigrant, escaped from the Germans during World War II, she happened to have had her sister's identity card in her pocket.

Asked why she had not effected the change of records during the past 27 years, she replied: "In the Boviet Union it is best to avoid unnecessary applications to the authorities, especially in matters pertaining to personal identity."
